Chapter 1. Course Reflection

WRIT 4662W was the first class I took that addressed the subject of coding itself. As my focus is biology I never learned to code, so this whole class was a learning experience for me.

Initially I struggled with getting pictures to render in an aesthetically appealing way

In the process of learning to create functional digital artifacts, one of my biggest obstacles was aesthetics, or rather my expectations versus the reality of what I was capable of. I quickly found that while many tasks were easy to accomplish, they were much harder to accomplish well.

A major challenge was learning to format my pages in more complex ways.
